

Mid Cap Value Outlook

On our February 15th webinar, Stan Majcher discussed current mid cap opportunities and how rising interest rates could impact equity valuations. The following recap highlights his views.

Stan Majcher, CFA
Portfolio Manager

Top Takeaways

- Slower growing sectors such as consumer staples, REITs and utilities reached excessive valuations in 2016, becoming riskier investments in our opinion.
- Approximately 30% of the Russell Midcap Value Index is composed of consumer staples, REITs and utilities, and traded at an average of 25x earnings.
- We focus on out of favor areas, such as financials and energy, while avoiding expensive areas of the market.
- In the first half of 2016, banks underperformed as investors believed rates would remain low; in the second half, financials rebounded as interest rates rose, increasing net interest margins and boosting profitability.
- We believe financials remain attractive as profitability should increase in a higher rate environment.
- With wide valuation spreads in energy, we believe there is ample opportunity to uncover attractive businesses with solid balance sheets and undervalued assets.
- The portfolio's current weight in energy is 19.7%; in 2014 it was roughly half that.
- We believe increased opportunities exist due to passive investors' indifference to equity valuations, which increases price inefficiencies.
- The portfolio holds approximately 60 stocks with solid balance sheets that we believe are attractively valued.
- We believe the portfolio offers unlocked value, as it currently trades at approximately 7-8x normalized earnings compared to 18x for the Russell Midcap Index.

Portfolio/index weights and earnings estimates as of 12/31/16.

Past performance is not a guarantee or reliable indicator of future returns. ©2017 Hotchkis & Wiley. All rights reserved. Any unauthorized use or disclosure is prohibited. For general information only and should not be relied on for investment advice. Opinions, forecasts and estimates are subject to change and cannot be guaranteed. All investments contain risk and may lose value. Equity securities may have greater risks and price volatility than U.S. Treasuries and bonds, where the price of these securities may decline due to various company, industry and market factors. Investing in value stocks presents the risk that value stocks may fall out of favor with investors and underperform growth stocks during given periods. Investing in small and medium-sized companies involves greater risks than those associated with investing in large company stocks, such as business risk, significant stock price fluctuations and illiquidity. For Investment Advisory clients.